Millennial financial literacy and fintech use

If you have ever felt a little lost when it comes to your finances, you are not alone.

Based on a recent report released by the TIAA Institute and the Global Financial Literacy Excellence Center (GFLEC) at the George Washington University School of Business, a financial literacy gap was found to exist amongst millennials.

Join researchers from the institute to hear more about this impactful study and how it may shape the future of finance and technology—some of what you learn, may surprise you.

Register today for this live webinar on Thursday, April 25, from 12 p.m. to 1 p.m. (ET).

Featured Speaker: Paul Yakoboski, Ph.D.
Senior Economist, TIAA Institute

As a senior economist with the TIAA Institute, Paul is responsible for research on lifetime financial security, including topics related to Defined Contribution plan design, financial literacy and capability, individual saving and investment decision making, and asset management during retirement, as well as research on workforce issues in the higher education and nonprofit sectors.

Yakoboski is a member of the American Economic Association and the National Academy of Social Insurance. He serves on the board of the Journal of Retirement, the editorial advisory board of Benefits Quarterly, the research committee of the Insured Retirement Institute and the Society of Actuaries’ Committee on Post-Retirement Needs and Risks.

Yakoboski earned his Ph.D. and M.A. in economics from the University of Rochester and his B.S. in economics from Virginia Tech.

Want help?
- It’s quick.
- It’s easy.
- It matters.

Schedule online

Or visit TIAA.org/webinars to register. And it’s at no additional cost to you!