A defiantly resurgent Russia is on the move! Not since the years of the Cold War has Russia appeared so dominant—and so threatening—in global affairs as she does today. When Russia annexed the strategic Crimean peninsula with astonishing boldness, stealth and speed, the world held its breath, and Ukraine, weakened by a popular revolution and factionalism, could only look on. The subsequent Russian destabilization of eastern Ukraine led to Western sanctions and the designation of Russia as a new evil empire. Can the world’s largest country (with its biggest nuclear arsenal) be designated a rogue state? And how do we understand Russia’s current trajectory, long and dramatic past and brilliant culture?

Russia bewilders, fascinates and frustrates. The United States clearly needs a new generation of Russia experts to shape our long-term policy, and everyone needs Russian literature, history, politics and culture to nourish the mind that seeks a challenge, and the spirit that looks for universal truth and beauty residing in Russia’s unparalleled artistic canon.

The Russian Area Studies program brings together courses in the humanities and the social sciences in an interdisciplinary program that explores Russia and Eurasia in depth and also with breadth, proffering a rich complement of courses that explore Russian language and literature, and Russian and Eurasian anthropology, culture, history and politics.

Please visit http://www.wellesley.edu/russianareastudies to learn about our faculty, courses, students and the many splendid happenings on our events calendar. If you have any questions about the Russian Area Studies program or courses, please feel free to contact me at ntumarkin@wellesley.edu, Adam Weiner, Chair of the Russian Language Department, at aweiner@wellesley.edu, or our assistant, Katie Sango-Jackson, at ksangoja@wellesley.edu. Friendly shake hands (as Lenin used to sign off to his English comrades),

Wintersession Program in the Republic of Georgia
Russian Area Studies 211

Wellesley's Program in Georgia invites students to immerse themselves in the life, history and creative imagination of this "jewel of the Caucasus." Georgia is home to a vibrant culture, renowned viniculture, delicious cuisine, and majestic landscapes capped by the snow-covered peaks of the Caucasus Mountains. Students join Williams and Mt. Holyoke peers in exploring Georgia through internships, visits to museums and churches, lectures by Georgian specialists, screenings by film directors, and excursions to unique Georgian sites, including Stalin's birthplace and museum and Dmanisi, the oldest early hominid site outside Africa. While in the capital city of Tbilisi students live with Georgian host families and work on internships designed in conjunction with the Georgian program coordinator. Wellesley students may apply to take this course in off years, when run by Williams or Mt. Holyoke. Prerequisite: None. Application required. 0.5 units of credit. Cross-listed as ANTH 211. Not offered as a Wellesley Wintersession course every year. Subject to Provost's Office approval. Distribution: SBA/HS

In 2016, RAST 211 will be hosted by Williams College and open to Wellesley students
The ecological and cultural values of Lake Baikal — the oldest, deepest, and most biotically rich lake on the planet — are examined. Lectures and discussion in spring prepare students for the three-week field laboratory taught at Lake Baikal in eastern Siberia in August. Lectures address the fundamentals of aquatic ecology and the role of Lake Baikal in Russian literature, history, art, music, and the country’s environmental movement. Laboratory work is conducted primarily out-of-doors and includes introductions to the flora and fauna, field tests of student-gathered hypotheses, meetings with the lake’s stakeholders, and tours of ecological and cultural sites surrounding the lake. Prerequisite or corequisite: BISC 111 or ES 101; RUSS 101; and permission of the instructors. Thomas Hodge and Marianne Moore. Preference will be given to students who have also taken HIST 211.

Offered Spring 2016 W 2:15-4:00pm
The magical Russian Firebird, with its feathers of pure gold, embodies creative genius and the salvational glory of Russian performing arts. In this course we will explore Russian ballet, opera, music, and theatre and their place in the culture and history of both Russia and Europe. One of the great paradoxes of the Russian experience in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries was the astonishing capacity of Russia’s composers, choreographers, dancers, painters, and writers to create many of the world’s greatest artistic works while living and working under almost unimaginably repressive political regimes. How was this achieved? In addition to larger themes and movements we will consider the contexts, histories, meanings—and, in some cases, iconic afterlives—of selected works and performers. Open to all students. Nina Tumarkin. May be taken as RAST 322 with additional assignments. Distribution: ARS. 1.0 unit of credit.

Anthropology Courses in Russian Area Studies
Societies and Cultures of Eurasia
Anthropology 247

A survey of the non-Russian, largely non-European peoples of the former Soviet Union (particularly ethnic groups in Ukraine, North and South Caucasus, Central Asia, and Siberia). The course will review how traditional cultures in these areas changed during the years of Soviet rule and will examine the problems they face today with newly gained independence or greatly increased autonomy. Nationality policies of the former Soviet Union will be discussed with a particular emphasis on how they affect the current territorial disputes and conflicts among different ethnic groups (e.g., the Russian Annexation of Crimea). Philip Kohl. Prerequisite: One unit in anthropology, economics, history, political science, or sociology.

Not offered 2015-2016
This seminar critically examines the use of prehistory and antiquity for the construction of accounts of national origins, historical claims to specific territories, or the biased assessment of specific peoples. The course begins with an examination of the phenomenon of nationalism and the historically recent emergence of contemporary nation-states. It then proceeds comparatively, selectively examining politically motivated appropriations of the remote past that either were popular earlier in this century or have ongoing relevance for some of the ethnic conflicts raging throughout the world today. The course will attempt to develop criteria for distinguishing credible and acceptable reconstructions of the past from those that are unbelievable and/or dangerous. Philip Kohl.

Prerequisite: One 200-level unit in anthropology, economics, political science, sociology, or permission of the instructor.

Not Offered 2015-2016
Comparative Literature and Political Science in Russian Area Studies
This course examines novels and stories whose basic reality is familiar up until the introduction of a magical element. The magic can take the form of a demon, a talisman, a physical transformation, a miraculous transition in space or time, etc. The appearance of a second plane of existence calls into question all assumptions about what we are accustomed to calling reality. Students will read Kafka’s Metamorphosis, Bulgakov’s The Master and Margarita, Marquez’s One Hundred Years of Solitude, Calvino’s If on a Winter’s Night a Traveller, Rushdie’s Satanic Verses, and short stories by Borges, Cortazar and Nabokov. Adam Weiner. Two periods, 1.0 units of credit. Taught in English. Open to all students. Counts toward Russian and Russian Area Studies majors.

Offered Spring 2016

MW 7:50-9:00 PM
In his Republic, Plato described his utopia as a land where people are divided into four classes depending on their intelligence, where a philosopher-king rules over all, and a guardian class spies and protects, where private property is forbidden and where children are taken from their parents to be raised for the state and taught only things that will increase their loyalty to the state. Eugenics is practiced; literature is banished. Plato’s vision has inspired socialist utopian fantasies and dystopian warnings alike. Students will read Nikolai Chernyshevsky’s What’s to Be Done?, H.G. Wells’ Time Machine and A Modern Utopia, Evgeny Zemyatin’s We, Aldous Huxley’s Brave New World, George Orwell’s 1984, and Ayn Rand’s Atlas Shrugged. We will examine the ideas and plans of Plato, Charles Fourier, Jeremy Bentham, Charles Darwin, Cecil Rhodes, and others as they take shape on the pages of the novels we read, and we will consider the extent to which the utopias we read are prophesy or proscription. Adam Weiner.

Offered Fall 2015
MTh 7:50-9:00 PM
An introduction to the history, politics, and international context of Russia and other countries of the former Soviet Union. The course will explore the creation, development, and dissolution of the Soviet Union, but will focus most closely on post-Soviet Russia and Eurasia. In doing so it will consider the interconnections between domestic politics, state-society relations, economic development, and foreign policy. Igor Logvinenko. Prerequisite: Open to sophomores, juniors, and seniors without prerequisite and to second-semester first-years with the permission of the instructor.

Offered Spring 2016.
History Courses in Russian Area Studies
For centuries, Russians have welcomed visitors with offerings of bread and salt. This introductory course is an earthy immersion in Russian everyday life and political culture from the age of Tolstoy to Putin. Black bread, dense and pungent, is central to our exploration of Russian drinking, feasting and fasting. We will also consider patterns of autocratic and communal rule and Russians' current political and commercial uses of portions of their history and civilization. How did and do Russians understand, represent, reinvent and market their past? This question will drive our discussions of national identity in a country that twice—in the course of one semester—lost an empire and struggled (and continues to struggle) to create a new Russian civilization and political culture. Nina Tumarkin. Open to all students.

Not offered 2015-2016
A multicultural journey through the turbulent waters of medieval and early modern Russia, from the Viking incursions of the ninth century and the entrance of the East Slavs into the splendid and mighty Byzantine world, to the Mongol overlordship of Russia, the rise of Moscow, and the legendary reign of Ivan the Terrible. We move eastward as the Muscovite state conquers the immense reaches of Siberia by the end of the turbulent seventeenth century, when the young and restless Tsar Peter the Great travels to Western Europe to change Russia forever. We will focus on khans, princes, tsars, nobles, peasants and monks; social norms and gender roles; icons and church architecture; and a host of Russian saints and sinners. Nina Tumarkin. Open to all students.

Offered Fall 2015
TF 11:10-12:20
An exploration of Imperial Russia over the course of two tumultuous centuries, from the astonishing reign of Peter the Great at the start of the eighteenth century, to the implosion of the Russian monarchy under the unfortunate Nicholas II early in the twentieth, as Russia plunged toward revolution. St. Petersburg—the stunning and ghostly birthplace of Russia’s modern history and the symbol of Russia’s attempt to impose order on a vast, multiethnic empire—is a focus of this course. We will also emphasize the everyday lives of peasants and nobles; the vision and ideology of autocracy; Russia’s brilliant intelligentsia; and the glory of her literary canon. Nina Tumarkin. Open to all students.

Not Offered 2015-2016
The Soviet Union: A Tragic Colossus
History 248

The Soviet Union, the most immense empire in the world, hurtled through the twentieth century, shaping major world events. This course will follow the grand, extravagant, and often brutal socialist experiment from its fragile inception in 1917 through the rule of Lenin, Stalin, Khrushchev, Brezhnev, and Gorbachev, after which the vast Soviet empire broke apart with astonishing speed. We will contrast utopian constructivist visions of the glorious communist future with Soviet reality. Special emphasis on Soviet political culture, the trauma of the Stalin years and World War II, and the travails of everyday life. Nina Tumarkin. Open to all students.

Not Offered 2015-2016
Seminar: Women of Russia: A Portrait Gallery
History 301

An exploration of the tragic, complex, inspiring fate of Russian women in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, a period that spans the Russian Empire at its height, the Russian Revolution of 1917, and the Soviet experiment. We will read about Russian peasants, nuns, princesses, feminists, workers, revolutionaries, poets, pilots and prostitutes, among others in our stellar cast of characters. Sources include memoirs, biographies, works of Russian literature, and film. Nina Tumarkin.

Prerequisite: Normally open to juniors and seniors who have taken a 200-level unit in history and/or a 200-level unit in a relevant area/subject.

Not offered 2015-2016
This seminar explores the many ways that victors and vanquished, victims and perpetrators, governments, political groups and individuals have remembered, celebrated, commemorated, idealized, condemned, condoned, forgotten, ignored and grappled with the vastly complex history and legacy of World War II in the past half-century. Our primary focus is the war in Europe, including Poland and Russia, although we will also consider the U.S. and Japan. We will investigate the construction of individual and collective memories about World War II and the creation and subsequent transformation of set myths about the war experience. In addition to books and articles, sources will include memoirs, primary documents, and films. We will also study the impact of war memories on international relations and analyze the “monumental politics” of war memorials. Nina Tumarkin. Prerequisite: Normally open to juniors and seniors who have taken a 200-level unit in history and/or a 200-level unit in a relevant area/subject.
Russian Department Courses
Elementary Russian: Russian 101-102

These courses serve as a comprehensive introduction to Russian, which is spoken by nearly 300 million people worldwide, putting it in fifth place among the world’s most widely spoken languages. We emphasize oral communication and self-expression. Students will complete oral and written exercises, read short stories and poems, and work with multimedia computer exercises in order to finish the course with the ability to read and write basic Russian as well as carry on everyday conversations. Elementary Russian opens the door to Tolstoy, Dostoevsky, Chekhov, Turgenev, Gogol, Pushkin, Solzhenitsyn, Pasternak, Nabokov, Tchaikovsky, Rachmaninoff, Stravinsky, Prokofiev, Shostakovich, and many other legendary Russians. Russian 101 may also be taken during Wintersession. Thomas Hodge, Adam Weiner. Four periods, 1.0 units of credit. Open to all students.

Offered Fall 2015-Spring 2016

Russian 201-202

Conversation, composition, reading, music, comprehensive review of grammar; special emphasis on speaking and writing idiomatic Russian. Students perform a play in Russian in 201. Alla Epsteyn. Three periods, 1.0 units of credit. Prerequisite: 101-102 or the equivalent.

Offered Fall 2015-Spring 2016
TWF 11:10-12:20
This course is offered as an immersion experience, designed to improve students' oral proficiency in Russian while introducing them to the cultural treasures of Russia's capital. Mornings students study language with instructors at the Russian State University for the Humanities. Afternoons and evenings they visit sites associated with Moscow's great writers, art galleries and museums, attend plays, operas and concerts. This course may be taken as either RUSS 203W or, with additional assignments, RUSS 303W. 1.0 units. Alla Epsteyn. Prerequisites: RUSS 201/ RUSS 301 or permission of the instructor. Application required.

Offered Wintersession 2016
Passion, Pain, Perfection
Russian 251 (in English)

No knowledge of Russian language or literature is required. A survey of Russian fiction from the Age of Pushkin (1820s-1830s) to Tolstoy’s mature work (1870s) focusing on the role of fiction in Russian history, contemporaneous critical reaction, literary movements in Russia, and echoes of Russian literary masterpieces in the other arts, especially film and music. Major works by Pushkin (Eugene Onegin, “The Queen of Spades”), Lermontov (A Hero of Our Time), Gogol (Dead Souls), Pavlova (A Double Life), Turgenev (Fathers and Sons), Dostoevsky (Crime and Punishment), and Tolstoy (Anna Karenina) will be read. Thomas Hodge. Two periods. 1.0 units of credit. Open to all students.

Offered Fall 2015
TF 9:50-11:00
Battle for the Russian Soul: Ideology and the Nineteenth-Century Russian Novel
Russian 272 (in English)

Nineteenth-century Russian writers were locked in a desperate struggle for freedom under an extraordinarily repressive regime. Through an intensive analysis of the great ideological novels at the center of Russia's historic social debates from the 1840s to the 1860s, we will unearth the roots of both Lenin’s revolution and Dostoevsky’s fervent anti-radicalism. The tension between literary realism and political exigency will be explored in the fictional and critical works of Chaadaev, Herzen, Belinsky, Turgenev, Chernyshevsky, Goncharov, Dobroliubov, Pisarev, and Dostoevsky. Isaiah Berlin’s famous essays on the Russian intelligentsia, as well as representative works from the nonliterary arts, including Tom Stoppard's The Coast of Utopia, will supplement our reading and discussion. Thomas Hodge. Taught in English. Open to all students.

Offered Spring 2016
TF 9:50-11:00
Perhaps no other writer has been as worshipped and also so demonized as Dostoevsky. His insights into the inner life and prophesies about the outer were so violent that he had to reinvent the novel form in order to contain them. Down the decades to this very day Dostoevsky has inspired, enchanted and outraged readers, but never left them unmoved. His writings have been called mystery plays, novel-tragedies, carnivals and polyphonies, to list only the polite names. In this course you will enter into the mysteries and excesses of Dostoevsky yourself through an exploration of his best books. Taught in English. Adam Weiner. Two Periods. Open to all students.

Not Offered 2015-2016
Lev Tolstoy: Russia’s Ecclesiast
Russian 277 (in English)

An odyssey through the fiction of the great Russian novelist and thinker, beginning with his early works (Sevastopol Stories) and focusing on War and Peace and Anna Karenina, though the major achievements of Tolstoy’s later period will also be included (A Confession, The Death of Ivan Ilich). Lectures and discussion will examine the masterful techniques Tolstoy employs in his epic explorations of human existence, from mundane detail to life-shattering cataclysm. Students are encouraged to have read the Maude translation of War and Peace (Norton Critical Edition) before the semester begins. Taught in English.

Thomas Hodge. Two periods. Open to all students.

Not Offered 2015-2016
“Ah, what a wicked deed I’ve done!
Am I indeed a tempter and a rogue,
Because I have made the whole world dream about my hapless little girl?

O, yes, I know that people fear me,
And burn my kind for sorcery,
And as from poison in a hollowed emerald
Perish from my artistry.”
~Vladimir Nabokov

Students will explore Nabokov’s English-language novels (Lolita, Pnin, Pale Fire) and the authorized English translations of his Russian works (The Defense, Despair, Invitation to a Beheading). Taught in English. Adam Weiner. Two periods. Open to all students.

Offered Fall 2015
MTh 6:30-7:40PM
Advanced Russian: Moscow
Russian 301

Topic for 2015-2016. Students will become experts in one of the great overarching themes of Russian culture: Moscow. We will read and discuss texts, view films, listen to songs, and compose essays on the theme of Russia’s historic capital. The course includes study of grammar and syntax, vocabulary expansion with strong emphasis on oral proficiency and comprehension. At the end of the semester each student will write a final paper and present to the class her own special research interest within the general investigation of Moscow’s history, traditions, culture, and art. Taught in Russian. Alla Epsteyn. Three periods. Prerequisite: 201-202 or the equivalent.

Offered Fall 2015
TF 1:30-2:40 W 2:15-3:25
An inquiry into the unique history, traditions, and myth of St. Petersburg. Students will explore Russia’s second capital through readings, films, and song. Special emphasis will be placed on oral proficiency. Each student will pursue her special research interest throughout the course and give an oral presentation on it at the end of the semester. Taught in Russian. Alla Epsteyn. Three periods. Prerequisite: 301 or the equivalent.

Advanced Russian:
Russian Comedy
Blockbusters
Russian 302

This course explores Soviet and Russian popular film classics loved by generations of viewers that have become cultural symbols. We will study G. Aleksandrov’s musicals of the 1930s; sentimental, detective and fantastic comedies by the masters of the genre, L. Gaidai, E. Riazanov, and G. Danelia in the 1950-80s; and post-Soviet crime comedies of the twenty-first century. We will attempt to determine the source of their enduring popularity and cult status through an examination of their aesthetics and of their social and political context. Taught in Russian. Alla Epsteyn. Prerequisite: 301 or the equivalent.

Not offered 2015-2016
Students will immerse themselves in the famous poem of Derzhavin, Zhukovskii, Pushkin, Lermontov, and Nekrasov, analyzing ballads and verse tales devoted to the natural and the supernatural. Exotic “Oriental” cultures as well as high and low Russian culture serve as the backdrop for these dramatic verse narratives. Russian painting, music, and history will enrich our discussions of Russian Romanticism in the poetry. One Period. Thomas Hodge. 0.5 units. Taught in Russian. Prerequisite or corequisite: 301 or 302.

Not offered 2015-2016
